A Romanov?

NEW YORK—Former Central Intelligence Agency official Herman Kimsey said yesterday that he believes that information the CIA gathered on defected Polish spy Michael Goleniewski could prove that he is the Czarevitch Alexei, son of Czar Nicholas II of Russia. Kimsey was once chief of CIA's analysis and research department, and more recently handled campaign security for Barry M. Goldwater. The Czarevitch is said to have been assassinated with the rest of the Czar's family by the Bolsheviks in 1918.
